We are looking for Junior Quantitative Researchers

L Y N X

ABOUT US

Lynx Asset Management is a quantitative hedge fund based in Stockholm. We apply scientific methods to create systematic investment strategies aimed at providing our clients with high risk-adjusted returns and attractive portfolio properties. Innovation has been part of our DNA since we started in 1999. At Lynx, we have managed to create a workplace where academic methods and a relentless focus on results are nourished by a friendly, collegial culture. The wellbeing of our employees is especially important to us as they are the ones who make us successful. Lynx actively strives towards being an inclusive workplace and we see diversity as a prerequisite for future success.

POSITION SUMMARY

In the role as a junior quantitative researcher at Lynx Asset Management, you will be part of one of the research teams responsible for the development, evaluation, implementation and supervision of the models, strategies and algorithms that drive our investment process.

You will support the existing research teams in their daily work. The work will typically include:

- Data management and analysis
- Development of tools for monitoring, control and filtering of data flows
- Implementation of strategies and models
- Development of tools for analysis of strategies and models
- Development of tools for risk analysis and portfolio construction
- Contributing to the introduction of modern technical solutions

Over time, we offer great advancement opportunities where you can take on a more independent role and take lead on projects ranging from strategy development and implementation to data management and system development.

WHO WE LOOK FOR

Candidates eligible for this role should recently have obtained a Master's degree in a relevant field. Further, we appreciate and value a good understanding of mathematics and statistics and good programming skills.

Although technical and mathematical skills are essential for you to contribute at Lynx Asset Management, we also hope that candidates share our values in being service-minded, attentive and conscientious. We believe that to be successful at Lynx, you should be humble while striving for success and a dedicated problem solver. Additionally, it is important that you are fluent in English and have a permanent Swedish work permit.
